When Host Hotels and Resorts acquired the Four Seasons Atlanta, they called on ForrestPerkins to rejuvenate the guest rooms and suites and to create a new luxury spa for its sophisticated clientele.

ForrestPerkins designed the guest rooms of the Four Seasons Atlanta to reflect understated luxury with a modern flair. Fabrics and carpeting in each of the two color schemes are highly textured, in understated shades of cinnamon and cream or amber and otter and subdued organic patterns. Artwork in the amber scheme reflects the hotel's proximity to Atlanta's arts district and the imagery in the cinnamon scheme portrays the rich natural beauty of Atlanta's landscape. Wood furnishings have elegant traditional lines and the upholstered seating is plush and inviting. In both schemes, the warm neutral colors serve as counterpoint to crisp white bed linens that are embroidered with Four Seasons' signature detailing.

The Spa at the Four Seasons Atlanta exudes elegance and comfort. Bathed in the warm glow of amber, blush and copper, the treatment rooms, reception, nail salon and relaxation rooms combine luscious natural teak with onyx and marble to calm the senses and banish tension. Artwork reflects the native flowers for which each treatment room is named, emphasizing the soothing effect of nature and the natural beauty for which Atlanta is renowned.
