Couple's Treatment Room

For the Willow Stream Spa in the legendary Empress Hotel, ForrestPerkins employed classical design elements and natural materials to convey a sense of luxury and old-world elegance. The designers created a couple's treatment room, ten individual treatment rooms, a mineral pool and a relaxing lounge, all in warm roseate and peach tones designed to compliment the complexion and promote a sense of well-being.

Notable architectural elements include a water wall dividing the reception area from the quiet treatment areas, two fireplaces and a dramatic marble stair with hand-wrought iron railings. To compliment the Empress Hotel's grand design ForrestPerkins used elements such as columns, detailed crown moldings, raised panel cabinetry and multi-colored stone flooring. Finishes include richly stained mahogany casework in the reception area and treatment rooms, Venetian plaster and glass mosaics at the mineral pool, and a variety of marble and granite in the reception area.
